

SMART GROWTH SELF-ASSESSMENT FOR RURAL COMMUNITIES

Smart Growth Self-Assessment for Rural Communities

The Smart Growth Self-Assessment for Rural Communities is a compilation of strategies, organized by 11 common “goal areas,” that villages, towns, and small cities can use to evaluate their existing policies to create healthy, environmentally resilient, and economically robust places. This self-assessment was developed as part of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency’s (EPA) Smart Growth Implementation Assistance (SGIA) project in Madison County, New York. For more information about the project, see Smart Growth Self-Assessment for Rural Communities: Madison County, New York, available at: <http://www2.epa.gov/smart-growth/smart-growth-self-assessment-rural-communities-madison-county>.

What does it do?

This self-assessment helps communities identify gaps in their policies, plans, codes, and zoning regulations by asking a series of “Yes” or “No” questions. All communities begin by completing the self-assessment’s Revitalize Village and Town Centers section, which gives a baseline indication of smart growth development policies within the jurisdiction. It goes beyond regulatory issues to help communities take stock of their local initiatives, strategies, and plans. Rural communities are not all the same, and this tool shares practices that a variety of rural places have used to improve their economies, environment, health, and quality of life. It includes resources and examples from communities around the country.

Who should use it?

This self-assessment tool is broad and interdisciplinary. Each section focuses on a specific set of issues and will likely require input from multiple parts of the local government, as well as from community residents and other stakeholders. Although a community does not necessarily need to complete all sections of the self-assessment, this tool works best when communities use it comprehensively and a local leader facilitates the process, such as a mayor, city manager, town planner, or anyone with a broad community focus.

How can this tool help rural places?

This tool addresses the challenges that face smaller communities. Rural communities often lack staff capacity and resources. This tool helps prioritize strategies and identify low-hanging fruit that can move a community closer to its economic, social, and environmental goals. Because rural communities often do not have zoning or development codes, this self-assessment focuses on policies, programs, and initiatives rather than strictly regulatory measures.

Instructions

This self-assessment is a checklist of smart growth strategies that are relevant to a wide variety of small cities and rural communities. Users can use it to identify gaps in existing policies, codes, and programs; or simply to learn more about common smart growth practices.

The self-assessment has 11 sections. Each section represents a common goal of small cities and rural communities. Each community must begin the self-assessment with the Revitalize Village and Town Centers section (mandatory). After completing that mandatory section, a community can complete only those that are relevant to the community's goals. The other sections are optional.

The self-assessment provides the 11 sections described below separately from these instructions:

- I. Revitalize Village and Town Centers \(mandatory\)
- II. Strengthen the Local Economy
- III. Engage and Connect Community Members
- IV. Improve Health and Promote Active Living
- V. Protect Natural Habitats and Ecosystems
- VI. Support Productive Agriculture for a Variety of Markets
- VII. Meet Housing Needs for Different Ages and Incomes
- VIII. Preserve Historic and Cultural Resources
- IX. Provide Transportation Choices
- X. Invest in Efficient Public Infrastructure Systems and Operations
- XI. Use Energy Efficiently and Provide Renewable Energy

As a community completes the sections, it is important to keep the following in mind:

- Wherever possible, coordinate across relevant departments and agencies to provide accurate responses.
- Reference relevant plans and policy documents where appropriate.
- Identify instances in which there may be conflicting perspectives or policies on an issue.
- Note when information for a response is not available.

The self-assessment is not intended to rate the planning efforts of a community. It does not enable a user to score policies, codes, or programs based on adherence to smart growth strategies. The following sections provide some additional information on how to use the self-assessment.

Preparing to Use the Self-Assessment

A user should select the sections of the self-assessment that are most relevant to your community's needs. After selecting the sections, it is important to identify which policy or planning documents to review. These documents will likely fall under two broad categories – plans and codes. Some specific examples of the kind of documents included in each category are listed below. Many sections of the tool, however, go beyond plans and codes to ask questions about policies, programs, initiatives, and public outreach within the community. For these questions, there may not be a document to reference, and responses may come from a variety of municipal offices or community-led groups.

Plans

- Comprehensive Plan
- Area Wide Growth Strategy
- Systems Plan (such as a Long-Range Transportation Plan)
- Sustainability Plan (or Local Energy Action Plan)
- Public Outreach Plan
- Interagency Coordination Agreements

Codes

- Zoning Ordinance
- Subdivision or Land Development Ordinance
- Engineering Standards
- Design Standards
- Building or Energy Code

Structure

The self-assessment organizes each section by three levels of content. The broadest level is goal. These are color coded to indicate whether the sub-topic (under that goal) is most likely to be addressed through a community's codes (blue), policies (green), or programs (orange).

Under each sub-topic are one or more questions that are shaded in grey. To the right of each question are three important columns.

- “Adopted: Yes or No?” Provides a space to indicate if a community has adopted the code, policy, or program in question.
- “Add or improve: Yes or No?” Provides a space where to indicate if this should be an area of focus for a community. A user should complete this column based on whether or not the community has already adopted the strategy and whether or not it is consistent with the community's goals. Cost and technical feasibility are limiting factors to consider. A user may choose to label each strategy as a high, medium, or low priority based on their judgment and knowledge of the community. Beneath each question is a series of strategies that can help a community implement smart growth approaches. The columns to the right provide a space where a user can indicate if this is an adopted strategy, and if not, if it is a strategy that the community may want to consider.
- Context. The self-assessment is comprehensive. As a result, some communities, particularly those with smaller populations, will find a lot of strategies that do not apply to them as they are for much larger jurisdictions. The rightmost column helps a community find strategies that are most likely to apply to the community's context. A “1” in this column indicates that the strategy likely applies to a large town or small city with about 10,000 people or more. A “2” in this column indicates that the strategy likely applies to a small town or village with about 10,000 people or less. A “3” in this column indicates that the strategy likely applies to a rural area, such as low density working lands or open spaces outside of towns and cities.

While the self-assessment helps a community evaluate existing codes, policies, and programs, it also provides some examples and resources for communities that want to work towards implementing new approaches. They are described in the footnotes and are often accompanied by a link to additional information.

Applying the Findings

The self-assessment assists a community identify strengths and gaps in policies, codes, and programs. While it provides examples of specific suggested strategies, the tool does not emphasize prescribing strategies to address shortcomings. Small cities and rural communities are diverse, which means the ideal solutions will vary from community to community. After the self-assessment, a community may find it helpful to hold a workshop to identify strategies that respond to a community’s unique goals, challenges, and needs. The workshop will focus on the high and medium priority strategies identified through the self-assessment, plus additional strategies that may come up during discussions with the community.

A workshop is an opportunity to review these strategies with the community, key stakeholders, and elected officials. However, a workshop is not necessary to move forward on implementing the strategies of the self-assessment. Ultimately, the user should aim to create an action plan that for each high priority strategy that identifies:

- Which official, staff person, or department of the local government will take the lead on advancing the strategy?
- Which documents (such as a comprehensive plan or zoning law) need to be amended to advance the strategy?
- Which decision-making bodies (such as a planning board) will need to adopt the strategy?
- What is a reasonable time frame to adopt the strategy?

Glossary of Key Terms

The self-assessment includes several terms that planners commonly use. This section provides definitions and information for some key terms.

- Accessory Dwelling Units – The American Planning Association uses the following definition: “accessory dwelling units (ADUs) are small, self-contained living units that typically have their own kitchen, bedroom(s), and bathroom space. Often called granny flats, elder cottage housing opportunities (ECHO), mother-daughter residences, or secondary dwelling units, ADUs are apartments that can be located within the walls of an existing or newly constructed single-family home or can be an addition to an existing home. They can also be freestanding cottages on the same lot as the principal dwelling unit or a conversion of a garage or barn.”¹
- Cluster Development – Cluster development is a technique where homes are clustered on a portion of a site and the rest of the land is preserved as open space. This can be an effective technique for creating a buffer between new development and rural land uses, such as agriculture, but cluster developments are often stand-alone subdivisions in the countryside surrounded by open space and requiring residents to drive long distances to get to daily destinations. Learning from this experience, local governments are beginning to direct cluster development to the periphery of existing towns and villages or are limiting their size (e.g., no more than 10 residential lots) to control the impact they have on rural character, agricultural operations, and wildlife habitat.
- Form Based Codes – The Form-Based Codes Institute uses the following definition: “A form-based code is a land development regulation that fosters predictable built results and a high-quality public realm by using physical form (rather than separation of uses) as the organizing principle for the code. A form-based code is a regulation, not a mere guideline, adopted into city, town, or county law. A form-based code offers a powerful alternative to conventional zoning regulation.”²
- Priority Growth Areas – Rural communities may decide to identify specific areas intended for growth and those that are to be preserved. The community should identify these areas through a public process, and they may be described in the community’s comprehensive plan. Communities can then review individual development proposals with an eye toward how they connect to comprehensive planning goals.
- Planned Unit Development – Local zoning codes in many areas permit negotiated developments, usually called Planned Unit Developments (PUDs). Communities often use PUDs for large areas that are master-planned by single or multiple property owners or developers. PUDs typically allow greater flexibility in layout, design, and land use than existing zoning and subdivision regulations. But PUDs can also present problems. For example, rural jurisdictions may lack staff capacity to negotiate development agreements; and codes may have insufficient standards or processes for governing PUDs and lack controls to ensure they are properly located, well designed, provide adequate infrastructure and community benefits, or are linked to the rest of the community.

I. Revitalize Village and Town Centers

Infill development³ brings new residents and jobs to existing neighborhoods and village or town centers, sparing farmland and open space on the periphery of the community that might otherwise develop to accommodate them. By placing new houses, offices, and shops in village and town centers, communities can reduce the amount people must drive to meet their daily needs while also spending less on infrastructure by getting more out of existing streets, water pipes, and sewer lines. Thriving town centers also drive local economic development and make it easier for people to walk to stores and services. Village and town centers are unique aspects of rural communities that contribute to a sense of place for visitors and residents.

⁴ Self-Assessment topics and policy options apply to one or more of the following scales: 1 – large town/small city (population is approximately 10,000 or greater); 2 - village/small town (population is typically under 10,000); 3 – rural (very low-density places, working lands, and natural areas outside of towns, villages, and cities).

II. Strengthen the Local Economy

Encouraging development in traditional downtowns and town centers reduces a community's infrastructure costs by maximizing the use of existing systems, which allows communities to invest in other needs or keep tax rates stable. Local governments can support development that meets their goals by streamlining the development review process for such proposals. Incentives to attract and maintain local businesses help create a strong commercial corridor that adds to the tax base and helps keep dollars spent within the community.

Goal: Strengthen the Local Economy	Adopted?	Add or Improve?	Context⁶⁵
Strengthening the Local Economy Through Efficient Current Planning Practices⁶⁶
Do development review procedures efficiently process development proposals?
Strategy 1: Development review procedures have an established and well-publicized timeline for processing and review milestones. ⁶⁷	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	1,2,3
Strategy 2: New development proposals go through a coordinated interdepartmental review procedure. ^{68,69}	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	1,2,3
Strategy 3: Development review procedures have an established and expedited timeline for processing and review milestones. ⁶⁷	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	1,2,3
Strategy 4: Pre-submittal counseling to educate applicants about local requirements is available and encouraged. ⁷⁰	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	1,2,3
Strategy 5: The municipality's website includes information and educational materials to help applicants learn about the review process. ⁷¹	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	1,2,3
Strengthening the Local Economy Through Comprehensive Plans and Local Government Policies⁷²

⁶⁵ Self-Assessment topics and strategies likely apply to: 1 – large town or small city (approximately 10,000 or more residents); 2 – village or small town (typically under 10,000 residents); 3 – rural (very low-density place, working lands, and natural areas outside of towns, villages, and cities).

⁶⁶ Developers prefer a clear, predictable development proposal review process because an unclear process and unanticipated delays cost them money. Having a coordinated interdepartmental review process helps the local government keep the process moving smoothly and ensure that all relevant departments have their chance to review the proposal.

Is there an inventory of local products, resources, or areas prime for development?
Strategy 8: Align local policy documents with county or regional economic development strategies and targeted industries or industry clusters. ⁷⁷	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	1,2
Strategy 9: The local economic development strategy includes an inventory of “shovel-ready” development sites with relevant details and contact information. ⁷⁸	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	1,2
Strengthening the Local Economy Through Programs and Services⁷⁹
Do local government officials meet regularly with business groups to discuss the local business climate?
Strategy 10: Local government staff visit local businesses periodically to discuss their needs, challenges, and opportunities, which the local government could address with a business retention and expansion program. ^{80,81}	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	1,2,3
Strategy 11: The local government participates in chamber of commerce and other local business organizations’ events to build connections with the business community. ⁸²	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	1,2,3
Strategy 12: Local and regional planning agencies keep track of local development projects and incorporate them into their planning efforts.	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	1,2,3

⁷² Targeting growth areas and identifying conservation areas in a comprehensive plan and zoning ordinance indicate to developers and private investors the long-range vision for land use and industry. By identifying priorities and strategies for achieving goals, cities can make private investments less risky and more attractive for developers and business owners.

IV. Improve Health and Promote Active Living

Building walkable and bikeable communities helps people live more active lives and supports better health. Improving transportation options and bringing different land uses, such as houses, parks, medical facilities, offices, and stores closer together improves access to recreational facilities, health care facilities, and healthy foods. More compact development patterns also protect ecosystems that are critical to clean air, soil, and water. Setting aside land for parks and green space, better connecting streets in new development to make walking and biking easier, and reducing stormwater runoff that can pollute water supplies help achieve these goals.

V. Protect Natural Habitats and Ecosystems

Directing development away from critical natural habitats and ecosystems and minimizing impacts from new development, such as increased stormwater runoff, help rural communities protect the waterways, forests, mountains, view sheds, and farmlands that are critical to their economic health, especially in places valued for their scenic or recreational assets. Providing incentives to use green infrastructure and preserve open space, along with programs to educate residents on the importance of land conservation, helps communities maintain their valuable natural resources.

Strategy 2: Codes encourage re-use of gray water where some or all water used in a building is captured, treated, and used or reused on site. ²²¹	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	1,2,3
Strategy 3: Codes include incentives or requirements for green infrastructure including permeable pavement, vegetated swales near roadways, green roofs, and rain gardens. ^{222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227}	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	1,2,3

Strategy 5: In mitigating site stormwater loads, stormwater runoff reduction strategies can be used to calculate offsets to stormwater requirements using conventional strategies such as retention ponds. ²²⁹	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	1,2,3
Do codes promote reduced water use in landscaping?

²¹⁹ Self-assessment topics and recommendations apply to one or more of the following scales: 1 – large town/small city (population of approximately 10,000 or greater); 2 - village/small town (population typically under 10,000); 3 – rural (very low density places, working lands and natural areas outside of towns, villages and cities).

VI. Support Productive Agriculture for a Variety of Markets

Preserving working agricultural lands supports the rural economy and can also help direct growth away from far-flung lands and back towards already-developed areas. Communities have found success through agritourism programs and developing new markets for local produce, such as local or regional farmers markets. Supporting small-scale agriculture and gardening in neighborhoods is also important for improving quality of life and providing access to fresh fruits and vegetables, especially in more rural areas where larger grocery stores are often only accessible via car.

Goal: Support Productive Agriculture for a Variety of Markets	Adopted?	Add or Improve?	Context²⁸³
Preserving Agricultural Lands and Open Space
Do zoning regulations and plans identify and preserve agricultural lands and uses?
Strategy 1: Zoning includes an agricultural district with established permitted uses. ^{284, 285, 286}	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	2,3
Strategy 2: Zoning defines “agriculture,” “agricultural land,” “farm,” “farm building,” “farm dwelling,” “livestock,” “crops,” and other important terms. ²⁸⁷	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	1,2,3
Strategy 3: Zoning does not limit the size of the parcel on which agricultural uses are allowed, thereby enabling smaller scale production of vegetables, fruits, and other products close to local markets where they may be consumed. ²⁸⁸	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	1,2,3
Strategy 4: Zoning allows small-scale farming of crops in developed areas. ^{289, 290, 291}	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	1,2,3
Strategy 5: Define and allow uses that support the regional food system in land use plans and development regulations. ²⁹²	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	1,2,3

²⁸³ Self-assessment and recommendations apply to one or more of the following scales: 1 – large town/small city (population of approximately 10,000 or greater); 2 - village/small town (population typically under 10,000); 3 – rural (very low density places, working lands, and natural areas outside of towns, villages, and cities).

²⁸⁸ Urban Farming and the Michigan Right to Farm Act (http://www.bsmlawpc.com/blog/Municipal_Law_Grand_Rapids_Michigan/post/Urban_Farming_and_the_Michigan_Right_to_Farm_Act/).

²⁸⁹ The purpose of this strategy is to enable small-scale farming or community gardening on vacant property in small cities and towns. Often, local ordinances prohibit these uses.. The local government can require that at least one other viable use is allowed by right if it wants to ensure that agricultural uses do not preclude future development.

VII. Meet Housing Needs for Different Ages and Incomes

Providing a wide range of housing types in the same neighborhood and close to shops, jobs, parks, medical care, and schools helps people drive less and buy or rent housing that meets their needs within their budget. Providing a mix of housing also helps communities retain residents who want to age in place, while attracting families who might have different housing needs. Increased housing options also help communities maintain a vacation- or recreation-based economy while keeping housing affordable for local residents. These types of neighborhoods can also engender more social interaction between people of different backgrounds and incomes. Communities can accomplish these goals by allowing accessory dwelling units in residential neighborhoods and more development downtown.

VIII. Preserve Historic and Cultural Resources

Reusing buildings, especially those with historic value, contributes to a community's distinctive identity, which can attract tourists and new residents. These buildings are often in the village or town center, so redeveloping them can bring new life to these places and absorb demand for residential, office, and retail space that might otherwise be satisfied at a more distant location. Preserving a community's cultural icons can also help attract tourism while promoting healthy living, beauty, and community pride.

Goal: Preserve Historic and Cultural Resources	Adopted?	Add or Improve?	Context 358

IX. Provide Transportation Choices

Compact and mixed-use town and village centers can encourage walking and bicycling, and they can be served more effectively by intercity public transportation and paratransit. Making it safer and easier for people to walk and bike also helps people stay healthy and allows older residents the ability to stay within their homes and neighborhoods. Walkable, accessible downtown areas also help local economic development, as people can more easily reach their daily needs without having to leave town. Communities can provide more transportation choices through the design of new development and by retrofitting existing transportation facilities.

Goal: Provide Transportation Choices	Adopted?	Add or Improve?	Context³⁸⁵
Making Areas Walkable, Bikeable, and Accessible to People with Disabilities and Mobility Challenges

Strategy 3: Sidewalk paths are clear of obstructions such as utility poles or mailboxes, allowing minimum clearance in pedestrian-oriented areas in new developments. ^{393,394}	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	1,2

X. Invest in Efficient Public Infrastructure Systems and Operations

Compact development allows existing infrastructure to serve more people and uses public funds more efficiently. Encouraging growth in village and town centers can help reduce the need for costly infrastructure extensions into undeveloped areas and can reduce maintenance and repair costs. Many communities also use green infrastructure to reduce stormwater runoff, which brings environmental benefits and can lower costs of treating wastewater.
